

Short burst follow up !

We received an e-mail from Mrs Crowther following the publication of our short burst photo this week - 'Tilly's Dad's cousin Jason Crowther has won the cheese rolling competition 2 years in a row and retired undefeated by the cheese.' She sent a link to a video containing his victory, I have watched it and it is a crazy event - most of the film is ok (one semi naked person) but nothing too bad except for people falling down the hill at great speed and a few incidents when the first aiders are involved. You may want to watch it first and decide if it is appropriate from your own child's perspective.

If you do watch it and want a follow up task then turn the sound off on the film and perform a commentary in the style of horse racing, football, snooker, darts, Grand Prix etc. You might watch some films or listen to professional commentators first. During lockdown a famous commentator, Andrew Cotter, has been commentating on his dogs and their actions (he even had a team meeting online with them !). A couple of links below -

The choice is yours and don't feel any pressure to do any of the above as it is over and above the work given and may also be 'too much' for your child and their understanding.

Kind regards

Mr Batstone
