

The Ghost of Stone Bridge

All was silent. All was motionless . It had changed since she had last been there. Her mother and fathers graves stood there proudly, as did Katelin, her big bulging blue eyes, filled with tears , as were her only living relatives her grandma, her old wrinkly hand grasped upon Katelin's shoulder."Can we go now?" Katelin asked softly, "go pop off and see Alice then" said Grandma with a sigh.

"Hey, what's the matter?" asked Alice, "oh, nothing." replied Katelin with a hint of anger in her voice. Suddenly, a gust of wind came thrashing through the open window of the living room.

"What, was, that?" Alice requested with a great deal of confusion, as she turned rapidly to meet Katelin's unsure eyes. "Don't have a clue," replied Katelin in an equal amount of confusion. "Is that the time already?!" exclaimed Katelin in shock. "I have to go," my Gran wants me back, she took a quick glance of her watch "half an hour ago!"

Back at home, Katelin, who was lay in bed silently, was thinking about the happenings at Alice's house and how she saw a slight greyish tint in the air that came through the window.

Suddenly, she sprung out of bed and packed a big bag of essentials, and as she rushed down the steep, narrow steps her Gran could just about make out the words "I'm going to stay with Alice tonight, bye!" She opened the front door of the small bungalow, of which they lived in, and slammed it loudly behind her.

As quick as a flash, she was at the big door of Alice's house and she started to think she should just go home. Just then, a slim woman came to the door and let Katelin in "do you mind if I stay here tonight?" asked Katelin. "Not at all!" replied the woman "just don't make a mess!" Katelin speedily ran up the carpeted steps to reveal the giant rooms, that stood calmly along the grand hallway and the most noticeable room was dressed in a bright pink and purple, Katelin slowly approached it, to reveal Alice signing and dancing in the mirror. "I need to talk, said Katelin "you know the air that came through the window? Did you see the greyish person?" Yes, I did and I just want you to have this." Alice pulled out a big, red leather book that read "The worlds most feared ghost!" "Who is the ghost?" asked Katelin. Alice drew closer to Katelin and said in a low voice "they call him the ghost of Stone Bridge, he is said to capture young girls and and eat their lungs and liver." "That's horrible" said Katelin.

Suddenly, the gigantic doors flew open and a shadowy figure walked past the eerie doorway and disappeared into thin air! Suddenly a loud bang came from the kitchen ,they both ran to see Alice's mum lay on the floor ,eyes wide open...

By Lily Grace Baskill